New Power Mac G5 coming in August

Steve Jobs was in fine fettle as he introduced Apple's new Power Mac G5 –the most significant new model in years! The new G5 tower is a new design from the ground up. In addition to the G5 chip running at 1.6 - 2.0 GHz the new tower design features an all aluminum case with front panel USB and FireWire ports. Inside all models sport a SuperDrive and single or dual processors on an 800 MHz to 1 GHz bus, up to 8 GB of RAM (not a typo), up to two Serial ATA hard drives, and three PCI-X expansion slots. The case design has four "thermal zones" and nine (9) intelligently controlled fans which make the machine twice as quiet as the previous Power Mac G4 model. Prices start at $2789 CDN with the dual 2.0 GHz model available at the very attractive $4189. Power Mac G5s are expected to ship in August.

iSight – Video Conferencing for the rest of us

At the WWDC conference Apple released a new video conferencing camera called iSight and a public beta of iChat AV software for Mac OS X 10.2.6.

The iSight camera is clearly the slickest video conferencing camera available for a personal computer and iChat AV software gets you going instantly with zero configuration – just plug in the iSight!
